

SCHOLARSHIP OPPORTUNITIES

The high cost of attending medical school can be overcome, in part, through financial aid and scholarship opportunities. There are 19 scholarships earmarked for FSU College of Medicine students, and the college's financial aid office can provide assistance in identifying countless other scholarships available from outside sources for the study of medicine.

In addition, the Southern Scholarship Foundation offers College of Medicine students the opportunity to apply for rent-free housing across the street from the medical school. Each female FSU medical student living at the Stone House and male student living at the Smith House is provided a furnished private bedroom and a bathroom to be shared with one other person. The houses include a furnished living room, dining room, fully equipped kitchen, laundry room, guest bathroom, patio and wireless Internet access.

ADMISSIONS

According to the Florida statute establishing the FSU College of Medicine, the college will seek to admit "diverse types of students who possess good communication skills and are compassionate individuals, representative of the population of the state." The admissions policy favors students demonstrating prior commitment to community service, nontraditional students with diverse personal and academic backgrounds, students from rural, inner-city and medically underserved population groups, and students who embrace the college's mission.
