Summer Institute application deadline is March 5

If you’re planning to attend the FSU College of Medicine’s Summer Institute, don’t delay: The application deadline is March 5.

The Summer Institute is a one-week residential program on the campus of Florida State University designed for students who are committed to pursuing a career in the medical field.

Among other things, the program:
- Motivates students to excel academically.
- Introduces students to a variety of clinical settings.
- Provides standardized test preparation for ACT and SAT.
- Provides information about scholarships and university mentoring programs.
- Exposes students to college life.
- Gives students a perspective on the life of a medical student.
- Exposes students to certain aspects of the medical school curriculum through interaction with faculty and participation in faculty-led presentations about medical topics.
- And inspires students to pursue careers in health-care professions.

For details, visit the Summer Institute web page.