TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (WTXL) - Today, graduating students in the Florida State University (FSU) College of Medicine Class of 2014 got notification of where they will enter residency training this summer.

Doug Carlson, spokesperson for FSU's College of Medicine, said 59 of the 113 students, or 52% who matched with a residency program did so in a primary care specialty, such as internal medicine, family medicine, pediatrics or obstetrics/gynecology.

17 students matched in family medicine, including one with the FSU College of Medicine’s new family medicine residency program at Lee Memorial Hospital in Fort Myers.

Seven students matched in Tallahassee — six with the College of Medicine’s internal medicine residency program at Tallahassee Memorial Hospital and one with TMH’s family medicine program.

40 percent of the students who matched did so in Florida, a state that ranks 44th nationally in the number of available residency slots.

FSU's College of Medicine is one of several colleges participating in Match Day, as graduating medical students across the country receive their match information at the same time on the same day.

This FSU College of Medicine class will be the 10th to graduate from the medical school, which first enrolled students in 2001.
