

Powered by Clickability

Posted: 10:51 PM May 19, 2011

Community College Awarded a Half Million in Grant Money

A community college in our area is seeing green after being awarded a half a million dollars in grant money.

Reporter: Candace Sweat

Email Address: candace.sweat@wctv.tv

5 people like this.

f i

North Florida Community College was awarded $521,124 in grant money to go toward the North Florida Rural Health Workforce Development Network - and organization aimed at improving health care options and services in rural areas.

Founders of the Network include FSU's College of Medicine.

"Really trying to give these medical students a chance to see what it is these rural areas have to struggle with, what are some of their challenges, and really to give them a sense of what rural really means," said John Fogarty, Dean of FSU College of Medicine. <

The grant will be disbursed over the course of three years. The network will host a summit on May 24th at NFCC to discuss training, retention, and recruitment in the rural medical fields.

Find this article at:

http://www.wctv.tv/home/headlines/Community_College_Awarded_a_Half_Million_in_Grant_Money_122272424.html?storySection=story

Check the box to include the list of links referenced in the article.

