FSU med students to explore rural medicine

First-year Florida State University College of Medicine students will visit rural communities today as part of the school's Rural Education Opportunity Program (REOP). Starting at 8:30 a.m. buses will depart with 30 first-year students, plus faculty and staff from the College of Medicine, other FSU colleges and Florida A&M University. The students will visit Graceville and Marianna in Jackson County, where they will visit a VA outpatient clinic; Cairo in Grady County, Ga., and Perry and Crawfordville.
