Magazine recognizes FSU medical school

Florida State University's College of Medicine is ranked No. 7 in the nation for Hispanics, according to Hispanic Business magazine. The magazine based its rankings on percentage of Hispanic student enrollment; percentage of Hispanic faculty members; percentage of degrees conferred upon Hispanics; and progressive programs aimed at increasing enrollment of Hispanic students.

Hispanics made up 14.1 percent of the medical school's student body and earned six of the 114 medical degrees (5.3 percent) awarded in 2011. Five percent of the college's full-time faculty was Hispanic.
