TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Florida State medical students to meet their match

Few events hold more drama, or have more impact, in the life of a medical student than Match Day. For many, the sealed envelope holds the key to the future. The residency match is conducted annually by the National Resident Matching Program. It's the primary system for pairing graduating medical students across the United States with residency programs at teaching hospitals. At the College of Medicine, 117 students from the Class of 2012 are expected to learn where they will continue their medical education. Graduating medical students across the country receive their match information at the same time on the same day. The College of Medicine's ceremony takes place:
