You may be eligible to participate in research studies at FSU Innovation Park.

- Non-Drug

Doctors and researchers at Florida State University (FSU) study diseases and other health problems. Our goal is to find better treatments for these health problems. To do this, we need the help of people who are willing to be in research studies.

The purpose of our research is to identify emerging treatment approaches that may help improve symptoms related to depression and anxiety. You may be eligible for multiple studies, including surveys about current and new therapies, virtual reality and/or Transcranial Magnetic Stimulation (a non-invasive method to stimulate the brain).

We are looking for adults age 18 years and above who suffer from depression and/or anxiety.

Potential participants will be screened by phone for eligibility and provided more details about our research. Treatments will take 2 weeks with 5-10 office visits, and up to 5 follow-up appointments. Eligibility for studies and total participation time will vary.
