

Today is your day

I am happy for you

It's the best day of the year

Because we celebrate you!

Your achievements are many

Your regrets fewer than none

You have changed many hearts,

Lets face it, You Won!

I cannot believe after so many years

You would still worry about me

Still shedding many tears

I am grateful for you and your incredible gifts

You taught me to love, to learn, and to lift.

While I created this poem I did not know what to say

You worked so hard, the words "thank you" couldn't pay

For your sacrifice, your love, your investment in me

I want you to know, you taught me how to be.

I now fight for justice, for those weaker than I

Like you did for me, when I was just a small fry.

I now work hard to make the world a better place,

Like you did before me, but mine's a slower pace.

My compassion for others has its roots in your teaching.

If it's as effective as yours, the results will be far reaching.

From you I learned that love conquers all.

And that all should be loved, no matter how small.

So this Mother's day, I did not forget

To say "I love you, Mom" so I won't regret.

I wish I were there to show you how much

Your love has formed me, made gentler my touch.

As we look to the future I will never forget

My mother's love for her child is the best I will get.

For I have the greatest mother in the world!
