DEAN'S MESSAGE

"When the Florida State University College of Medicine clinical teaching model was originally proposed, skeptics had a field day. Utilize community physicians for clinical teaching, at six campuses and three rural sites across the state? Surely, they said, community models could not meet rigorous academic standards. More than 10 years later, these critics congratulate Florida State for our amazing outcomes. Our students have excelled on objective measures of learning and clinical abilities at levels far beyond predictions and well above national averages. In addition, the data show that we are meeting our legislated mandates and the conscience of our mission to develop exemplary physicians who practice patient-centered health care, discover and advance knowledge, and respond to community needs, especially through service to elder, rural, minority, and underserved populations. The Orlando Regional Campus and its more than 500 community faculty are a major part of that success. Now the FSU College of Medicine Clinical Research Network is tapping into the vast practice-based clinical research potential created by our successful education model. Our accomplishments have redefined how medical education can produce outstanding graduates and successfully impact the health of Florida's diverse communities."
